CHAPLAIN’S CORNER
Being the Parent You Want to Be
Have you ever noticed your parenting ‘drift’ over time? You start out with a brilliant plan, full of enthusiasm and the best of intentions, but six months later you’re doing something quite different. Like all things that are worth doing right, your parenting will benefit from a regular check-up. Once or twice a year, sit down and have a clear look at what’s working, and what isn’t. Consider inviting a trusted friend to give you their feedback.
Are you busier than you want to be, raising your voice too often, or unable to remember the last time you played a board game with your kids? Make a plan for change. Remember, confident and happy parents reflect on their success too, so it’s just as important to give yourself credit for what you’re doing well.
